Field of the Invention The present invention relates to a printing apparatus, a technology associated with the same, and a storage medium. Description of the Related Art The advent of network printing apparatuses has increased the ease with which documents are transmitted and printed. However, security issues are also concerns in printing apparatuses, because the printing apparatuses sometimes receive printed objects from third-party software applications, such as word processors. Japanese Patent Laid-Open No. 2008-056194 discloses a technology associated with prevention of unauthorized reception of documents when reading the printed objects. However, a possible situation may arise in which printed objects may be received by an authorized user from a third-party application. In such a case, the user may wish to conceal that an unauthorized object is being read, thereby protecting third-party software applications that print on behalf of the user. In view of the above, there is a need for a printing apparatus that allows a user to specify the printing processing of received documents with a higher degree of security in terms of user confidentiality. 1. Technical Field The embodiments described herein are related to a voltage boosting circuit, and more particularly to a voltage boosting circuit used in a semiconductor device. 2. Related Art As the functionality of a semiconductor device is increased, a supply voltage used in the semiconductor device may vary according to a power consumption of the semiconductor device. The supply voltage may be reduced at a standby time of the semiconductor device during which the power consumption may be reduced compared to an active time in which the power consumption may be increased. An internal voltage supplied to a voltage boosting circuit may drop according to the change of the supply voltage, which may cause malfunctions of the semiconductor device. FIG. 1 illustrates a conventional voltage boosting circuit. A reference voltage V_{ref} is supplied to first and second reference voltage units 11 and 13 via a power supply unit 10. The reference voltage unit 11 may generate a first reference voltage V_{m1} according to the reference voltage V_{ref} . The reference voltage unit 13 may generate a second reference voltage V_{m2} according to the reference voltage V_{ref} . The first and second reference voltages V_{m1} and V_{m2} may have values obtained by multiplying the reference voltage V_{ref} by a given voltage. A first operational amplifier (OP amp) 12
